

Gardy Rosius is the Associate Deputy CIO of Architecture, Engineering, Technology, & Innovation (AETI) for the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), Office of the Chief Information Officer (CIO). In this capacity, he works closely with the Deputy CIO and other stakeholders to help the agency evolve and maintain a resilient and innovative IT culture.

With nearly 2 decades of experience in both the private and public sector, Mr. Rosius leads with an emphasis on transformative innovation and information engineering. He holds a strong interest and awareness on emerging and advanced information technologies that may impact and enable the agency's overall mission goals.

Previously, Mr. Rosius served as the Deputy Director for Application Engineering and Development at the U.S. Department of Commerce, U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, helping the agency to stay at the 'cutting edge of the nation's technological progress and achievement'. Mr. Rosius also spent several years at the U.S. Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service, in various IT leadership roles.